Just Here and There

If the chauffeur of the sprinkling wagon would cease dousing autos and pop-pops he would be held in higher esteem by a majority of the people.

A "want ad." placed in this paper will insure you a visit from the postman. The Big Evening Disappointment, whose abode is on North Lincoln avenue, will mail you a postal asking you if you ever tried their "want" column. We believe that the people of Chanute are educated enough to know where they want to put their business with out troubling Uncle Sam with packing postals around to take up your valuable time.

Death of Lewis Brown

Lewis Brown, colored, died last night at 6 o'clock, at his home 313 North Central. The funeral will be held this afternoon from the African Methodist church at 3 o'clock. Burial will be made at Elmwood. Mr. Brown was 83 years of age. His wife survives him.

Miss Hazel Mills returned to Erie today after spending Friday in Chanute.

Blow Your Horn

The following is a list of actual occurrences in a week of motor car driving by one of Chanute's automobile owners, who wishes his name withheld.

"I met a farmer on the north bridge. He had a pair of mules and a hay rack. The farmer at the point of a pitchfork made me back my car off the bridge and let him go by. I forgot to blow my horn when I got to the bridge. Next time I was going about twelve miles an hour up Main street and at Lincoln a boy on a bicycle dodged in front of the car. I put on the brakes and prevented an accident. Forgot to blow my horn that time, too. Another instance was like this. I was going north on Highland and another car came down Highland to Main and turned west. Moses saw the car and waited, and the other car missed him by about a foot. By waiting too long a time to turn an accident had nearly happened. This car owner acknowledged that if he doesn't start to toot his own horn, there is going to be something doing. He is going to study the rules of the road and says he thinks a few more ought to make the same resolution.

Miss Cascolene Cox, a student at the Pittsburg Manual Training school, is home for the week-end.

Watson Stewart and family motored to Humboldt last night to attend the band concert.

GROCERIES You Can Depend Upon

Nothing is more disgusting to the housewife than to place a grocery order and then not get what she ordered. We never have a complaint like that—our groceries satisfy.
